ENGINEERED FLOORING

Engineered hardwood floors are a combination of a hardwood veneer on top of durable engineered plywood sheets. The core is generally comprised of multiple layers of plywood or other similar structures that are resistant to moisture, humidity, and varying temperatures, allowing it to be installed on any grade. Due to their increased stability, engineered hardwood collections are generally available in longer and wider planks than their solid counterparts.

SOLID HARDWOOD

Solid hardwood is lumber that is milled from one piece of wood. Other flooring types such as engineered hardwood, laminate, and vinyl are constructed mostly from wood composites or synthetic material. Solid hardwood is ideal for any rooms above grade that do not usually come in contact with water. It is also important to note that solid hardwood is not recommended to be installed directly onto concrete, making other flooring types ideal for those applications.

VINYL FLOORING

Our vinyl flooring products are made from synthetic materials as opposed to wood materials. This type of flooring is ideal for areas that come in frequent contact with water -- kitchens and bathrooms, as the planks themselves are waterproof. This makes vinyl products suitable to be installed on any grade. All of our vinyl products use the convenient drop-lock-click system that helps in reducing the time and resources required for installation.

LAMINATE FLOORING

Laminate flooring products are made from synthetic materials that mimic the look of natural wood. Laminate flooring is an affordable and water-resistant option for various areas of the home. It is also resistant to scratches, stains, and fading, making it suitable for high-traffic areas. Laminate flooring can be installed on any grade and offers a wide range of designs and finishes.

Engineered Hardwood

Sunspear - Crown Land Collection

Grandeur's bold and durable engineered hardwood floors are built with a robust multi-layer core, where each layer runs in opposite directions to provide extra strength and stability. This unique construction reinforces the floors, allowing them to withstand the fluctuations of the Canadian climate, ensuring lasting performance and resilience in any environment.

The Elite Collection of oak engineered hardwood showcases impressively wide 9-½" boards, with most planks exceeding 7' in length. Each plank undergoes over 144 hours of meticulous processing, including rigorous selection, manual sanding, and reactive staining to achieve the perfect texture and color. With some of the widest boards available, the Elite Collection is designed for high-end appeal, making it the ideal choice for the most luxurious homes.

Due to high demand, Grandeur now offers herringbone flooring in both engineered and vinyl options, available in a range of our most popular colors.

What's trending in interior design?

While undertaking a home renovation is a lot of work, it can also be a creative and exciting journey. One of the latest trends making waves in interior design is the incorporation of curved elements. From arched doorways to rounded furniture, curves add a soft, inviting touch to any room, creating a sense of flow and movement that feels modern and luxurious.

Adding visual interest is also key, and homeowners are increasingly embracing textured walls and unique finishes. Whether it's a feature wall with a bold pattern or a statement piece with a tactile surface, these elements can elevate the ambiance of a space and make it more dynamic. Mixing materials like wood, stone, and metal is another great way to create a visually engaging environment.

Bright and bold colors are making a comeback. Shades like vibrant emerald, deep navy, and mustard yellow are becoming popular choices for accent walls, cabinetry, and even flooring. These striking hues bring personality and energy into the home, helping to make a memorable and impactful impression. So, when planning your next renovation, consider exploring these trends to add character and style to your space.

Sunnybrook - Prestige Collection

Prestige Collection

The Prestige Collection features AB grade (select and better) wood, representing the highest quality of wood flooring available. At this grade, wooden planks are cut from the center of the log where the wood is most uniform in appearance with minimal color variations. AB grade planks have very few knots, which are almost unnoticeable or unobtrusive, and the sap content is very low to nonexistent. This results in a clean, uniform look that is often found in new and modern homes.
